Dear Parishioners,

From the first word of the entrance antiphon of the liturgy we gain an insight into what this Sunday is to be about, which is called Laetare (Rejoice) Sunday. It is an invitation to interrupt for a moment the severity of Lent. The joy suggested to us does not come from the conditions of the world. It is difficult to find reasons to rejoice: how many conflicts still fill the earth with blood! How many poor are abandoned! The reason for joy does not come from the world but the getting close to Easter, which transforms death into victory, and sadness into joy.

The joy of the man born blind whom we encounter in our Gospel this Sunday sees again. We find in him the joy for which the liturgy asks of us. He was blind from birth and stayed on the margins of the street to ask for alms. It was a fixed destiny, as people say. Jesus stopped as soon as he saw him. The disciples asked him: "Rabbi, who sinned, him or his parents, that he was born blind?" Jesus looks at the blind man with eyes of the heart and answers: "Neither he nor his parents sinned." Jesus shows how we need to look at that blind man, at all the poor, the suffering, and the sick: look at them with compassion.

Jesus looks at him, is moved and he gets close, and touches him with a thoughtful gesture, not a distracted one. He bends and takes the dust and after wetting it with his saliva he spreads it on the man's eyes. Remember that it is the hand of God that formed man and woman from creation, and which continues to renew us. In this reading I see a connection with the ashes, that dust with which we began Lent.

The Lord loves us because we are weak, because we are dust. And when Jesus tells the blind man to wash in the pool of Shiloh without hesitation, he goes to the pool to wash. With very quick summary, the evangelist writes: "he went, he washed himself and then he returned he could see." The miracle was not a magical act: it was done through that gesture of tenderness of Jesus' hand together with the obedience of that blind man to the word which was uttered to him.

God has chosen a mission requiring our human cooperation

The lives of Mary and Joseph can inspire us to cooperate in Jesus’ mission, even when it is difficult or unexpected.

Dear brothers and sisters in Christ,

This week begins with St. Joseph, whose solemnity is celebrated on March 20 this year, and ends with Mary with the solemnity of the Annunciation on March 25. I’d like to propose two ways that Joseph and Mary can help our approach to the All Things New strategic planning initiative.

The first is the astonishing fact that Jesus, although He was God, needed human support when He came in the flesh. Both Mary and Joseph — each in their own way — provided support for His physical body and therefore ultimately for His saving mission. It could have been otherwise. He didn’t have to come into the world this way — in a way that made Him depend on human support. But He willed it to be so. And both Mary and Joseph gave Him the support He needed from them.

How does that relate to All Things New? Simply this: Jesus still needs human support — ours! Jesus didn’t have to make the presence of His sacramental body, in the Eucharist, depend on human priests. But He did. He didn’t have to make the presence of His mystical body, the Church, depend on all of us. But He did. It could have been otherwise. But He willed it to be this way. The question is: Will we lend Him our support — like Mary and Joseph — or will we turn away when it gets hard?

That leads to the second point of reflection: The lives of Joseph and Mary weren’t easy! In fact, they were harder precisely because God chose them to be so closely associated with His saving mission.

Think about Mary’s pregnancy: It was quite unexpected for her and quite troubling for Joseph. And that was just the beginning! Think about their journey to Bethlehem: It wasn’t part of their plan, but it was part of God’s plan. The same goes for their flight to Egypt. At each turn, the support Joseph and Mary needed to give Jesus was unexpected, got harder and required more creativity. We might have expected that their path would be easier because they were specially chosen by God. But God is no “lawnmower” parent, making everything smoother for His chosen people. Quite the opposite: God actually asks more from His chosen people than He does from others. The deeper their mission, the deeper the suffering they undergo.

How does that relate to All Things New? It’s important to understand that this pattern applies to us, as well. God has chosen us for a mission. Now, like Mary and Joseph, we’re realizing: That makes things harder, not easier!

The question for us becomes: Will we continue to lend Jesus our support when the way becomes unexpectedly hard, requires greater sacrifice and demands deeper creativity? I think that’s the point at which we can turn to Joseph and Mary, ponder their example, and ask for their prayers.

Women of the Cathedral
Women of the Cathedral– April 1, 2023

Dear Ladies of the Cathedral Parish,

Come grow in faith and fellowship with other ladies in the parish at the monthly gatherings of the Women of the Cathedral. We gather in the name of Jesus and He promises us the gift of the Holy Spirit.

At our last gathering the ladies shared their awareness of the Holy Spirit in people of other faith traditions who they encountered in their lives. It is the role of the Holy Spirit to unite people in the Divine Presence. It is the desire of God the Father to unite all people in His Son Jesus through the power of the Holy Spirit.

Our next is on Sunday, April 1, 2023. We will begin with 8 AM Mass in the Cathedral, and then go to Boland Hall for a light breakfast. After brief introductions and social time, an informative program is led by Msgr. Mikesch, our spiritual director, with closing prayer at 10 AM. An ongoing highlight is “Ask Msgr. Mikesch Time.”

To learn more and RSVP for breakfast, contact Barbara Murray at 314-974-6900 or email murraybj@swbell.net by March 29, 2023. Please send your questions for “Ask Msgr. Time” when you RSVP.

Week 4: St. Clare of Assisi
(Located in the All Saint Chapel)

This week we proceed from our reflection on the life of St. Francis of Assisi to a consideration of one of his most celebrated followers: St. Clare of Assisi. Our painting this week comes to us from Cathedral Basilica parishioner Maggie Jackson, whose passion for Christian sacred art has brought her under the tutelage of Aidan Hart, the director of The Prince’s School of Traditional Arts, based in London. This painting represents the establishment of the order of “Poor Ladies of San Damiano,” as it was known at the time of St. Clare, by Pope Innocent IV. The Holy Father was initially concerned that the absolute poverty which St. Clare insisted should be observed by the women of the order was too austere. After visiting the sisters, he allowed them to continue their observance of absolute poverty and two days before her death he gave official approval of the order’s rule of life.

For our reflection, we might consider two aspects of the life of St. Clare: her relationship to St. Francis of Assisi and her embrace of poverty. St. Clare felt deeply drawn by God to imitate the life of poverty she observed in the life of St. Francis. Significantly, the first time she heard St. Francis preach was during the season of Lent, and it was on Palm Sunday of 1212 that she met him in person and left behind all of her earthly possessions to imitate his life of poverty. While it was initially St. Francis’ imitation of the poverty of our Lord Jesus that inspired St. Clare in the pursuit of her own religious vocation, the way that she lived this evangelical counsel did not exactly imitate that of St. Francis. While the Franciscan friars who followed St. Francis tended to move about from place to place and engage in preaching, the Poor Clares as they came later to be called, lived a conventual life in community, observing silence and engaging primarily in manual labor. In other words, St. Clare imitated the life of St. Francis without trying to copy it exactly. Our imitation of the saints will often be similar. It is the virtues and the devotion of the saints that we look to for example, while always bearing in mind that the virtues and the supernatural gifts by which we are equipped to pursue lives of holiness are always creative, and the ways in which God seeks to operate in us will always take into account our individuality and uniqueness.

Who are the saints that you might look to during this season as guides to your own pursuit of holiness? What virtues do you see in them which you are trying to imitate?

Additionally, of course, during this season of Lent we are all invited to imitate in our own way and according to our own vocations the poverty exemplified in the life of St. Clare. In a particular way, our almsgiving during this holy season gives us the opportunity to practice in even small ways the detachment from earthly goods that characterized the life of our Lord Jesus Himself. While we may not be called to imitate Jesus in physical poverty in the way that St. Clare did, we are all called to a poverty of spirit which is a matter of seeking our ultimate fulfillment and happiness only in God, while at the same time recognizing our utter dependence upon God. During this season, we are each invited to examine what are the earthly things in our lives that most often pull us away from these spiritual attitudes. What are the things or pleasures of the world that I’m most often tempted to turn to in pursuit of happiness or satisfaction? What are the things of the world in which I’m most often tempted to seek stability or security? How might my almsgiving this season help me to detach from these worldly things so as to be more firmly attached to the only One in my ultimately satisfaction and security can be found?

A Thought on The Sanctity Of Life

“To celebrate the Gospel of life means to celebrate the God of life, the God who gives life… In every child which is born and in every person who lives or dies we see the image of God’s glory. We celebrate this glory in every human being, a sign of the living God, an icon of Jesus Christ”

Weekly Thoughts on Giving
“Everyone who drinks this water will be thirsty again. ” John 4:13

Jesus reminds us that material things, even something as basic as water, can never satisfy us over the long run. When we build our lives around material possessions we will always want more and no amount will ever satisfy our desire. True joy and peace only comes when we follow Jesus - when we become more “God-centered” and less “self-centered.”
