Dear Parishioners,

This Sunday, the Second Sunday of Lent, we hear in our Gospel the story of the Transfiguration. After Jesus foretold his Passion to the disciples, "Jesus took Peter, James, and John and went up the mountain to pray. While he was praying his face changed in appearance and his clothing became dazzling white." (Lk 28-30) According to the senses, the light of the sun is the brightest known in nature. But according to the Spirit, the disciples briefly glimpsed even more intense splendor, that of the divine glory of Jesus, which illumines the whole history of salvation.

Peter, James, and John contemplating the divinity of the Lord, are ready to face the scandal of the Cross. Let us, too, share in this vision and His supernatural gift, making room for prayer and for listening to the word of God as we continue our Lenten Journey.

I have included in my article this week an image of Raffaello's painting of the Transfiguration. Sacred images have long been defined by their ability to arouse contemplation in their beholders. Medieval thinkers often defined the devotional function of the sacred image as its ability to channel the response of the viewer from the sensible surface to contemplation of divine things. Thus, the viewer perceives the image with eyes, recall its subject (eg. Transfiguration) from memory, and then meditates on its spiritual meaning.

Each week during Lent, you have the opportunity to view images of Sacred Art in the All Saints Chapel. Please make sure that you take the time to view the image and meditate on its spiritual meaning. To assist in this, Father Povis, along with gathering the works of art, provides each reflection.

God plants seeds of blessings within adversity

Biblical lessons drawn from times of adversity can guide us in All Things New

Dear brothers and sisters in Christ,

The readings for the second week of Lent come from key moments of adversity in the history of Israel. They also contain some important lessons for the adversity we face in the history of the Archdiocese of St. Louis and the All Things New planning process. We hear from the prophet Daniel. The action in the book of Daniel is set in the time of the Babylonian Exile (the 500s BC), though it was written during a much later crisis of persecution (167-164 BC). In the midst of adversity, Daniel focuses on the open confession of Israel’s sins and the hope for God’s mercy.

We hear from the prophets Isaiah and Micah. Both were writing at a time when Assyria had destroyed the northern portion of Israel, and when the Assyrians were threatening Jerusalem. Their focus, amidst adversity, is on the impending judgment of God followed by the hope of forgiveness and restoration.

We hear from the prophet Jeremiah, whose prophetic ministry occurred during the great national disaster of the Exile. Specifically, we hear that the people are plotting Jeremiah’s death because he’s telling them the hard truth about their unfaithfulness and its consequences. Interestingly, that same day, we hear Jesus’ third prediction of the Passion in the Gospel of Matthew. In the midst of adversity, Jeremiah places his life in the Lord’s hands, just as Jesus will in the Garden of Gethsemane.

Finally, we hear from the book of Genesis about how Joseph is sold into slavery by his brothers. But, in one of the great twists in the lectionary, after hearing that Joseph was sold for 20 pieces of silver, the Psalm has us proclaim: “Remember the marvels the Lord has done!”

I’d like to pause there on that twist. I think it contains a key lesson for us as we go into the next step of All Things New.

Psalm 105 focuses on how the Lord was at work: not in spite of the adversity of Joseph but right in the midst of it. Recalling the famine that would later strike the land of Israel, it says: “[The Lord] sent a man before them, Joseph, sold as a slave.” If not for the adversity of Joseph, Israel would not have been saved from famine; because of the adversity of Joseph, Israel was saved.

Looking back at the rest of the prophets we read this week, we see a similar lesson: The Lord was present and working right in the midst of the adversity Israel experienced in its history. Their history, again and again, was uncomfortable. But, again and again, it followed this pattern: Times of adversity always contained the seeds of greater blessing. It’s as though the whole history of Israel foreshadowed the cross, in which the greatest adversity became the greatest blessing.

There are two ways to handle adversity. One is with a bitterness that refuses to enter into it. This is understandable: adversity is hard! But it’s also unfortunate. It misses the seeds of blessing that God plants within adversity.

The other way to handle adversity is with a conscious surrender. We go with God into the dying of adversity, because we’re confident in the rising that follows.

Are we heeding the lessons of salvation history as we face our own adversity? I think that is worth pondering as we go through All Things New.

The suggested donation is $10.00 per remembrance. The names of all those being remembered will be printed in the parish bulletin on Easter Sunday and the week following Easter.

Please indicate in whose memory, or in whose honor, you wish the flowers to be dedicated. A Lenten Retreat with Sacred Art
Week 2: St Michael the Archangel
(Located in the All Saints Chapel)

During this season of Lent, particularly through our fasting and almsgiving, we are invited to strive to detach ourselves from earthly things. We live in a society of such abundance and it is so easy to constantly surround ourselves with worldly goods that entertain us, delight us and give us pleasure. While many of these earthly goods are perfectly legitimate and not at all sinful in themselves, one of the risks that we run through constant engagement with them is forgetting that physical, earthly things are not the only things that exist.

In the Creed that we profess every Sunday, we confess belief that the one, true God is the Creator of all things visible and invisible. There is, indeed, an entire realm of invisible realities which constantly surround us, and which simply lie beyond the boundary of what we can see and touch. One of the intended benefits which our Lenten fasting and almsgiving can bring about is that as we detach our minds and our wills from visible, earthly things by forgoing some of them, we free our minds and hearts to settle upon invisible, heavenly things: the souls of those who have gone before us, the grace by which we are made holy, God Himself, just to cite a few examples.

Among the beings that populate that invisible realm are those creatures which are somewhat like us in that they possess an intellect and free will, but which are also nothing at all like us in that they do not have bodies. They are pure spirits. Scripture refers to them as angels and our Cathedral Basilica is filled with traditional artistic depictions of them to remind us that while we may not be able to see the angels, they are very much there.

Our image for this week is an icon written by Cathedral Basilica parishioner Maggie Jackson depicting one of the angelic beings we read about in Scripture: Saint Michael the Archangel. St. Michael is referred to in both the Old Testament and the New Testament and he is traditionally considered to be the defender of Christians and of the Church, having remained faithful to God at the rebellion of Satan and the other angels who freely chose to separate themselves from God. St. Michael is also depicted in the ‘Creation Arch’ of the Cathedral Basilica, where he stands below God the Father and is identified by his traditional Latin name, Quis ut Deus, which translates as the rhetorical question “Who is like God?”

In the Gospel for the First Sunday of Lent, we hear that after Jesus undergoes His temptation in the desert, He is ministered to by angels. So too does the Gospel of Luke report to us that an angel comes to Jesus in His hour of agony and temptation in the Garden of Gethsemane. As you look upon this icon of St. Michael and are reminded once again of that unseen realm which always surrounds us, perhaps consider what moments in your life might most benefit from the assistance of an angel. When might you call upon St. Michael or your guardian angel? In moments of temptation? Of anxiety? Of doubt? Of fear? Perhaps make an act of faith once again in the reality of those beings and creatures which we cannot see, but which nonetheless are very real. As we continue to progress through this Lenten season, allow your mind, freed from attachment to earthly things by the penances you undertake, to regularly return to that realm and be reminded of the whole host of angels and saints who stare into the very face of God and pray night and day on your behalf that you might be united more closely with Him.

St. Michael, the Archangel, pray for us!

A Thought on The Sanctity Of Life

The Gospel of Life is “meant to be a precise and vigorous reaffirmation of the value of human life and its inviolability, and at the same time a pressing appeal addressed to each and every person, in the name of God: respect, protect, love and serve life, every human life! Only in this direction will you find justice, development, true freedom, peace and happiness!” (The Gospel of Life 5)

Weekly Thoughts on Giving

“Therefore, every tree that does not bear good fruit will be cut down and thrown into the fire. ”Matthew 3:10

Do you bear good fruit for Jesus? Do you spend time in prayer or do you waste it with mindless activity? Do you use your talent to help others or are you too busy? Do you use your treasure to support the Church or do you buy more things that go unused. Our time, talent and treasure are gifts from God. What we do with these gifts is our gift back to Him. What gifts are you planning to give to the Lord during this upcoming Christmas season?
