Dear Parishioners,

This Sunday's Gospel takes us back to Easter evening. The two disciples on their way to Emmaus had hurried back to Jerusalem and were telling the others what had happened to them. And then Jesus "in person" appears in their midst and greets them again saying: "Peace be with you." Jesus finds them still incredulous, amazed and full of doubt. In the Acts of the Apostles, Luke writes that Jesus "After his suffering he presented himself alive to them by many convincing proofs, appearing to them over the course of forty days and speaking about the kingdom of God" (Acts 1:3). We could say that Jesus took forty days to make the disciples understand the mystery of his death and resurrection, so central is this mystery to Jesus for having faith in him.

The disciples were attached to their doubts. We must be aware that there is a subtle temptation in doubt, that of never choosing, thus maintaining an inner reservation. Doubt can, of course, come, but cultivating it and cherishing it ends up making us think we are clever and intelligent, but actually making us sad. We could say that those forty days were like a great school during which Jesus explained Moses and the Prophets to them, and this time the evangelist also adds the Psalms.

Listening to the Scriptures and the preaching done by Jesus, the disciples dissolved their doubts and hardships and were freed from fear and dread. But Jesus showed them the power of his resurrection by which he had defeated evil, and which was to be communicated to all: "repentance and forgiveness of sins is to be proclaimed in his name to all nations, beginning from Jerusalem."

Jesus breaks down the walls of the room where they had shut themselves in out of fear, and he hears before him all peoples. To that frightened little group, Jesus says that they must go out to all peoples, no one excluded: all have the right to encounter the Gospel, the good news of salvation that consists in conversion, that is, in the fruit that is reaped after preaching and in the gift of forgiveness from the Lord. From Easter day onwards, the universal dream of Jesus is clear. At the end of the meeting Jesus says to them: "You are witnesses of these things." This is the first time that Luke's Gospel uses the term "witnesses" in relation to the disciples. The risen Lord wants us to be passionate witnesses and not uncertain and cautious officials; joyful witnesses and not fearful disciples protected by closed doors; witnesses, who live what they communicate and who by communicating it, learn to live it.

The Eucharist allows us to take in the ‘medicine of immortality’
It would be uncharitable if we don’t share the Good News found in the Eucharist

Dear brothers and sisters in Christ,

“I am the bread of life … whoever eats this bread will live forever” (John 6:48, 51).

This week, we hear the “bread of life” discourse from John 6. Several components help to show why we need a Eucharistic revival.

One of the basic presuppositions that made the bread of life discourse matter to its original audience is the knowledge that eternal life is something we need to receive, not something to which we’re entitled or toward which we’re automatically tending. That’s one of the reasons why the theme of “eternal life” permeates the bread of life discourse. Jesus says: “Do not work for food that perishes, but for the food that endures for eternal life, which the Son of Man will give you.” And He says: “Whoever believes in the Son has eternal life, and I shall raise him on the last day.” And He says: “I am the living bread that came down from heaven; whoever eats this bread will live forever.” And He says: “Whoever eats my flesh and drinks my blood has eternal life.”

Jesus wants to give His eternal life to us. One of the ways He does so is through is through the Eucharist.

It may seem odd that this is how we receive eternal life. But C.S. Lewis has a wonderful passage in “Mere Christianity” addressing this puzzlement: [P]lease remember how we acquired the old, ordinary kind of life. We derived it from others, from our father and mother and all our ancestors, without our consent, and by a very curious process involving pleasure, pain and danger. … Now the God who arranged that process is the same God who arranges how the new kind of life — the Christ life — is to be spread. We must be prepared for it being odd, too. He did not consult us when He invented sex; He has not consulted us either when He invented this.”

St. Cyril of Alexandria thought of the Eucharist as the “medicine of immortality.” For him, the logic of the matter was simple. We, of our own power, tend toward death. God, on the other hand, is immortal. Because Jesus is God in the flesh, His flesh and blood have immortal life. So, if we consume His flesh and blood in the Eucharist, we take in “the medicine of immortality.”

Sometimes we speak of evangelization as “one beggar telling another beggar where to find bread.” We might also speak of a Eucharist centered evangelization as one sick person telling another sick person where to find medicine.

We’re rightly concerned with saying we believe the faith but not actually living what we believe. That’s the error of hypocrisy.

We’re just as much in danger today of an opposite error: believing and living the faith, but never being willing to tell others what we believe. Let’s name that for what it is: If we’re all dying, and the Eucharist is the medicine of immortality, failing to tell people about it is a lack of charity. And that’s a good reason for a Eucharistic revival! Let’s tell the world the Good News.

Sacrificial Love & Triumph
Mosaic of The Last Supper

The Gospel reading for today, the Third Sunday of Easter, recounts Jesus’ resurrection and appearances to His disciples, highlighting His sacrificial love and triumph over sin and death. Luke’s account, distinct from Matthew and Mark, is tailored for a broad audience, including non-Jewish readers, emphasizing the universality of Jesus’ message of salvation. The Gospel highlights salvation and redemption, showcasing God’s love and the call for everyone to find forgiveness and reconciliation through faith in Jesus Christ, making it a vital piece for understanding the inclusive nature of God’s invitation to salvation.

Following last week’s readings, we continue to hear accounts of Jesus’ appearances to his disciples following the resurrection. Today’s reading begins directly following the report of Jesus’ appearance to his disciples on the road to Emmaus. This is the exact event that is being recounted in the opening verse of today’s Gospel. In almost every report of Jesus’ post-resurrection appearance, Jesus begins by greeting his disciples with the words, “Peace be with you.” This is a very important and apropos greeting since the disciples just witnessed the brutal death of someone that they dearly loved, and they now fear for their own lives as well. Peace is what they need more than anything. Jesus often connects greetings of peace with another gift— the gift of forgiveness. We notice in today’s Gospel reading that this connection of peace with forgiveness is present in the final few verses.

Even as they hear Jesus’ greeting of peace, the disciples are immediately startled and even terrified. They are uncertain of what to make of the person before them. Quite understandably, they even mistake Jesus for a ghost. Yet the man before them is not a ghost; Jesus, seeing their fear, immediately invites them to experience his resurrected body with their own human senses. He invites them to look at him and to touch him. The man standing before them in human form is very much flesh and bone, and still bears the marks of His crucifixion. Although his disciples will never forget his torture and death, peace begins to fill their hearts and minds, and their fear soon turns into amazement and wonder.

As further proof of his identity and resurrected body, Jesus eats a meal with his disciples. The disciples have come to know Jesus best through the simple meals that he so often shares with them. Descriptions of these exact meals are a distinct and defining element of the Gospel according to Luke. By eating with his disciples after His resurrection, Jesus recalls all these meals, and most importantly, he recalls the Last Supper which was shared directly before his arrest and eventual death on the cross.

Luke’s description of the Last Supper and the meals that Jesus shared with his disciples after his resurrection show us the true significance of the Eucharist. Having shared a meal with his disciples, Jesus now uncovers for them the importance of what was written about his plan for salvation in the scriptures. So, too, our celebration of the Mass is an encounter with the living Christ, through the Word and Sacrament of the Eucharist. As Jesus commissions his disciples to be witnesses to what the scriptures foretold, our celebration of the Eucharist commissions us. Just like the disciples, we are sent to announce the good news of Jesus’ forgiveness of sins and everlasting salvation.

Weekly Thoughts on Giving
“Jesus himself stood among them and said to them, ‘Peace be with you. But they were startled and frightened…’” - Luke 24:36-37

Throughout the day we have many opportunities to “see the face of Jesus” in others and to “be the face of Jesus” to others. Do we take that opportunity to provide “peace” to those we encounter or are we afraid of what others will think of us and do nothing? Pray for the strength and courage to live a “God-centered” life and not a “self-centered” life.

A Thought on The Sanctity Of Life

“Like us, Christ entered the world through the womb of a woman. He willingly experienced the fullness of human suffering. He breathed his last on the Cross at Calvary in order that He might save us. Therefore, ‘God is the foundation of hope: not any god, but the God who has a human face and who has loved us to the end’ (Spe salvi 31).” USCCB Secretariat of Pro-Life Activities “Respect Life Reflection: Christ Our Hope in Every Season of Life” (citing Pope Benedict XVI)
